New Subway Entrance Moves Forward

Friday July 13, 2012, during the hours 10:00 pm and 6:00 am the New York City Fire Department will be testing our fire standpipe system servicing the newly construction subway entrance. This will involve first testing the system with air and then with water. The FDNY will then fill the system with water from their trucks. The testing will be conducted from two sides of the site, along Flatbush Avenue and Atlantic Avenue. The truck along Flatbush Avenue will be located on the west side across the street from the Arena and positioned on the sidewalk closest to the connection; it will not impede pedestrian flow. The one along the Atlantic Avenue side will be within the fence. It is not anticipated to be noisy work and is part of the standard sign off of the standpipe system.
